

Written and Illustrated by Juei Pathak

Tales Of Navdurga

VI

Katyayini and the Whispering Woods

In a land where rainbows touched the earth and flowers sang sweet songs, lived a special girl named Katyayini.
She was kind and brave,
and always ready to help.
Her best friend was a magnificent lion named Raja, with a mane like spun gold.

Katyayini and Raja loved to journey through the sparkling rivers and tall, whispering trees.

They always kept an eye out for anyone who needed

a little cheer or a brave roar.

One sunny morning, they heard faint whispers from the Whispering Woods. The trees usually hummed happy tunes, but today, they sounded worried.

A tiny, shy little bird, Chirp, flew to Katyayini, its feathers ruffled with fear.

"Oh, Katyayini!" chirped the bird.
"A big, tangled Vine-Monster has grown too fast in the heart of the woods!
It's blocking the sunshine and making all the little plants sad!"

"We must help the Whispering Woods!"
declared Katyayini,
her eyes shining with resolve.
Raja let out a soft, encouraging rumble, ready for adventure.

They ventured deep into the woods.
Indeed, a giant, thorny Vine-Monster had spread its tendrils everywhere, casting deep shadows.

The smaller plants
looked pale and sad.

Katyayini knew that kindness was stronger than any tangle. She held up her shiny sword, not to cut,
but to reflect the warm, golden sunshine right onto the Vine-Monster's heart!

Raja let out a mighty, friendly roar!

It wasn't a scary sound, but a cheer that echoed with happiness and bravery, encouraging the sunbeams to shine even brighter.

Slowly, the Vine-Monster began to shrink and loosen its grip.

It didn't like the bright light and happy sounds! It preferred to be grumpy and dark.

Soon, the Vine-Monster had completely retreated, leaving behind clear paths and sparkling sunlight. The little plants perked up, and the woods hummed with joy once more. Rishika and Kesari showed everyone that even the biggest problems can be solved with a brave heart and a little bit of kindness and light.